● Process of Storyboarding:

In the film industry, storyboards are used to plan out an entire movie, shot by shot, before filming begins. The storyboard for Scene One opens with a sketch of what the first shot, or camera angle, will look like.
The next shot, from a different angle, is shown in the next image on the storyboard - you will learn to understand these concepts.

● Storyboard Essentials:

Storyboards are essential because they help studios define the parameters of the story within the required resources and time.
And that's the best way to guarantee a smooth production process.
If the animated video is complicated, it will take a lot of time and a larger budget to produce - you will learn to understand these concepts.

Animated Storyboard

An animatic is an animated storyboard—a slideshow of images depicting movement. To create an animatic, make a rough draft animation, usually with sound effects or music, giving filmmakers an idea of what the final animation or live-action sequence will look like.

Storyboards are visual representations that aid in the the creation process of digital storytelling. Storyboards layout images in sequential order to create the the flow of the production. You will also learn the technical aspects and explanations of design
